

JAGUAR C TYPE REPLICA

The Jaguar C Type (officially called the XK120-C) is a sports racing car produced by Jaguar Cars between 1951 and 1953. It was designed for endurance racing, particularly the prestigious 24 Hours of Le Mans race, and featured a lightweight aluminum body, aerodynamic styling, and advanced engineering. The C Type was powered by a inline-six engine and featured a four-speed manual transmission and disc brakes, which were a new and innovative technology at the time. The C Type was an immediate success on the racing circuit, winning the 24 Hours of Le Mans in both 1951 and 1953, as well as a number of other endurance races throughout Europe. The car's success was due in part to its advanced engineering and aerodynamic design, which allowed it to achieve high speeds and handle well on both straightaways and curves. The C Type was also notable for its innovative disc brakes, which allowed for more precise and effective braking than traditional drum brakes.

Despite its success on the racing circuit, the C Type was only produced in limited numbers, with a total of just 53 cars built over the course of two years. However, its impact on the automotive world was significant, as it helped to establish Jaguar's reputation as a manufacturer of high-performance sports cars and paved the way for future racing successes, including the iconic D Type and E Type models. Today, the Jaguar C Type remains a highly sought-after collector's item, with examples commanding high prices at auction and among vintage racing enthusiasts.

As there were so few C Types produced and they are valued at one million dollars, some amazing replicas were produced. Like the one we are presenting here to you today. She was built off the chassis of a Jaguar XK150 and her aluminium body was handmade using the specifications from a real C Type racecar. She was left unpainted which gives her a very raw and race-ready feeling. Interior wise, you will find period correct leather bucket seats as well as leather accents which complement her raw interior.

Mechanically, she is ready for many more racing/rally/road miles. This C Type features a smooth 3.8L inline-six from the Jaguar XK150 with SU carburettors and a smooth shifting 4-speed manual gearbox. In order to stop this powerful racer, you will find disk brakes in the front and drum brakes in the rear. As her previous Belgian owners took part in a variety of gentleman rallies, her mechanicals have always been serviced and maintained well. She also comes with Belgian registration.

What are you waiting for? Here is your chance to own and drive a piece of Jaguar history without paying one million dollars. Come and test drive her and discover her exhilarating engine sound...
